I think I was pretty crazy when I was young and made a lot of quick decisions...
I'm not that different now but I do move a little slower.

Q Exclusive: Neil Young opens up on life, love of cars in 'Super Deluxe'

In a two-part Canadian broadcast exclusive, Neil Young joins Jian to discuss his second memoir Special Deluxe: A Memoir of Life and Cars. In it, Young uses his obsession with cars to lead the reader on a journey through his life as an artist, musician, father and husband.

"[Classic cars] are beautiful pieces of sculpture, and the artists who created them were reflecting the spirit of the time," says the singer-songwriter, whose iconic career has spanned more than five decades.

Delivered in his trademark straightforward style, Young's memoir covers everything from his difficult childhood in a small Ontario town, to his early days in Buffalo Springfield, to his modern crusade against global warming.

"My view is 'where am I going?' Not 'where have I been?'" Young says.

The outspoken environmentalist also talks about reconciling his self-described obsession with cars with his passion for protecting the earth.

"The automobile is only one symptom of the big problem," he says, "and the big problem is turning the ship of earth around and heading in a different direction."
